Top stories of the week

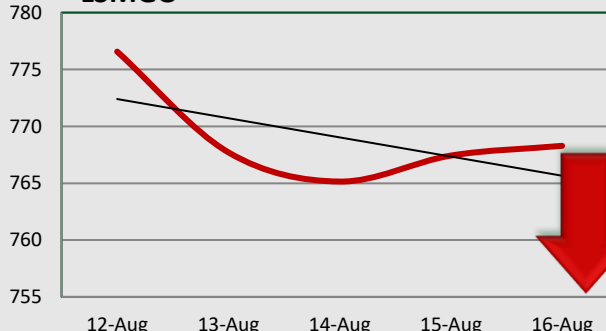

➤ Bunker fuel prices fell at most ports on Friday, with global average VLSFO prices slipping to the lowest level in almost a week. Ship & Bunker's G20-VLSFO Index of prices across 20 leading bunkering ports lost $0.50/mt to $619.50/mt on Friday, reaching the lowest level since August 12. The G20-HSFO Index rose by $2/mt to $516.50/mt, while the G20-MGO Index sank by $3/mt to $790/mt. ICE Brent crude futures slipped by $1.36/bl to $79.68/bl on Friday. VLSFO prices at the top four ports mostly followed a negative trend. At Singapore prices lost $2/mt to $605/mt, at Rotterdam they fell by $4/mt to $552/mt, at Fujairah they rallied by $0.50/mt to $601/mt, and at Houston they dropped by $0.50/mt to $566/mt. On Monday morning Brent futures were trading down by $0.13/bl from the previous session's close at $79.55/bl as of 5:48 AM in London. In metric tonne terms that would be equivalent to a $0.98/mt fall in bunker prices. (Ship & Bunker, August 19, 2024)

➤ Maritime services firm GAC has expanded its operations in Spain to the Port of Huelva. The firm's services for customers in Huelva will include bunkers, as well as ship agency, husbandry, customs clearance, crew change support and freight services, it said in an emailed statement on Wednesday. The firm had opened an office in Algeciras in November 2023. "As development of infrastructure for both green hydrogen and renewable energy continues to gain momentum in the south of Spain, our presence in both Huelva and Algeciras become increasingly vital for supporting our customers," Sergio Delatorre, managing director of GAC Spain, said in the statement. "We are committed to supporting our ship owner and ship management customers wherever they go. "Now, with enhanced capabilities, we are better placed than ever to serve them in true GAC style, leveraging our global reach and local knowledge to support their strategic goals."
